

Zebulun Davenport, Ed.D.

Vice President for University
Advancement and External Affairs,
West Chester University

Dr. Zebulun Davenport is the Vice President for University Advancement and External Affairs at West Chester University (WCU). He was formally the Vice President of Student Affairs at WCU and worked to provide opportunities to educate, empower and engage students in life outside-of-the-classroom. His contributions have advanced campus culture, organizational structure, and student success. Under his leadership, two student affairs divisions at West Chester University have received Diverse Magazine's distinction of "Most Promising Places to Work." Davenport's expertise includes student retention, outcome assessment, strategic planning, and strategies for assisting first-generation college students.

Davenport earned his Doctorate in Higher Education and Leadership from Nova Southeastern University and Master of Education in College Student Personnel Administration from James Madison University.

Davenport's publications include co-authoring two books entitled "First-Generation College Students: Understanding and Improving the Experience from Recruitment to Commencement" and "Student Affairs Assessment, Evaluation, and Research: A Guidebook for Graduate Students and New Professionals". He has presented at workshops for numerous public agencies, educational institutions, state, regional, national conferences, and to thousands of college students and professionals throughout his career.