What will it cost overall? Who are you partnering & coordinating with?

In 2026, the nation's 250th anniversary of independence will coincide with a powerful milestone for the Colonial Pennsylvania Farmstead: 50 years as a public living history site. This yearlong commemoration provides a unique opportunity to deepen public understanding of the Revolutionary Era through the lens of everyday farm families whose labor, choices, and values shaped early America.

What distinguishes the Farmstead is its commitment to full-cycle historic farming, demonstrating how nearly 90 percent of colonial Americans sustained themselves through agriculture. Few sites are positioned to tell this story as holistically as the Farmstead, where history is not only interpreted but actively lived through seasonal, hands-on agricultural practice. Through living history, visitors experience how farming anchored daily life while intersecting with the political, economic, and cultural upheavals of the Revolutionary Era, connections that remain relevant today.

Programmatic support in 2026 will enable the Farmstead to expand this work through increased seasonal farming activities and a broader range of demonstrated 18th-century trades and skills while inviting the public to directly engage with history through hands-on, place-based experiences. The Farmstead will also strengthen partnerships with community organizations, artists, and historic tradespersons to deliver shared programming, expand offerings, and increase regional visibility during this milestone year.

While the Farmstead is located right over the county line in Delaware County close to 50% of the site's annual visitation and school groups come from communities in Chester County. The Farmstead is committed to extending reach in Chester County with ongoing promotion with Chester County Tourism and participation in the Chester County Tourism Savings Pass.

The overall project budget is $75,000 and includes salary support for education and interpretation, education program supplies, instructor fees for historic skills workshops, guest presenters, and care for the site's heritage breed animals central to the visitor experience.
